

Room TO THINK

Room to Think is a coworking space, the first of it's kind in the Tri-Cities.

We help people in creative and knowledge-based businesses thrive by providing a stimulating and social workplace where collaboration is spontaneous, competition is fun, and the relationships are long-lasting.

The typical one person shop doesn't necessarily have the resources to set up a professional office environment. Membership at Room to Think provides an easy way for the solo or small business to take that step with the bonus of joining an environment geared towards success. Our members are part of a group that's highly motivated in supporting each other's efforts.

There's an impressive amount of knowledge in our member base. By offering a series of events that are educational and social, we encourage our group to interact and learn from each other. Self improvement coupled with many opportunities to share is a huge benefit to all involved.

Community is a key word at Room to Think. We all assist in the planning and management of the organization. We are a volunteer-run non profit, and we have a very motivated and involved Board of Directors which is filled with founding members of our organization. The board provides guidance, but our members are the driving factor in the success of our events and projects.

Sponsorship

Our sponsors are essential to our success. Their financial support enabled us to make Room to Think a reality: to sign a lease, furnish the rooms, and open our doors. For that, we are incredibly grateful. Many became sponsors because they believe that Room to Think is something special, and beyond financial help, they have shown a personal investment in these young and hopeful businesses by sharing their time, experience, and knowledge. They attend our events, drop in occasionally for a day of coworking, and make the time to support our members' businesses—including Room to Think itself—through mentorship. We can't say enough how much we appreciate their support.
